

Personal Project Proposal

Mia Generoso

For my personal project I would like to revamp my Mija website from Web Dev two years ago. I plan to rename it DaxWear and to give the site a sleek and updated look. It will still be an online shopping website that sells all kinds of clothes: shirts, pants, sweatshirts, athletic clothes, dresses, swimwear, and shoes. When you click on the site you will see the home page. I will have a navigation bar at the top of the site where users can navigate to different categories of clothing, find help, access their cart, and search the site. I don't know how to implement a search bar, so that will be something that I will have to learn if it's possible. When the user navigates to a particular category, the page will display all of the items in that category and then the user can filter the page how they would like (color, size, price, etc.) I will also have to learn how to filter a page. When the users click on an item, a new page will open where they can select size or color, read reviews, and then add to their cart. There will also be a size chart and a short description next to the picture of the item. If possible, I would like to have that page show similar items or items that other users often viewed after that one. When the user accesses their cart, they will be able to see each item in it and change the quantity or remove items if necessary. There will be a button that says "Checkout" which will bring them to the payment page. I will have to learn how to implement payment, and I know you mentioned learning how to link PayPal. I will also have to have a page for shipping where the user can pick their shipping option and enter their address. I will probably use flash messages after the user adds an item to their cart or checks out to let them know that their action was successful. There are some things that may be a little challenging about this, but I am super excited to get started! My brother's name is Dax and my parents have always wanted to start a clothing company called DaxWear so I really want to make this website for them. I think they own a website called daxwear.com but they've had it for about fifteen years and have never done anything with it. I just want to excite them and maybe even inspire them a little bit!
